DMCI Holdings posts Php 11.8 billion in 9M net income, down 22% on mixed segment results

Diversified engineering conglomerate DMCI Holdings, Inc. reported a consolidated net income of Php 11.8 billion for the nine-month period ending September 30, 2025, representing a 22% year-on-year drop from Php 15.1 billion a year ago.

The contraction was primarily due to weaker earnings from the integrated energy and construction segments, alongside the ongoing integration of the recently acquired cement business.

Despite the challenges in some of the core businesses, the diversified portfolio provided resilience. Stronger performance from real estate, nickel mining, and off-grid power generation, as well as higher equity earnings from associates partially offset the decline.

For the third quarter alone, consolidated net income fell 33% year-on-year to Php 2.7 billion, reflecting softer energy markets, weather disruptions in mining operations, as well as higher production and operating costs across the group.

Earnings Contribution Breakdown

For the nine-month period, Semirara Mining and Power Corporation contributed P5.8 billion, down 34% from P8.9 billion last year, following weaker coal and electricity prices and higher production costs. Record-high volume growth in shipments and power generation helped mitigate the impact.

DMCI Homes contributed P2.7 billion, up 11% from P2.4 billion, driven by the increase in residential revenues from newly-recognized accounts during the period, as well as higher rental and finance income.

DMCI Power posted its highest-ever nine-month contribution of P985 million, up 4% from P947 million, supported by increased energy sales and new bunker-fired plant in Palawan and a new power supply agreement in Antique.

DMCI Mining contributed P726 million, reversing a P17 million net loss last year, on the back of robust nickel prices and higher shipments following the full activation of a new Zambales mine, which expanded the number of active mines from one to two.

D.M. Consunji, Inc. contributed P187 million, down from P467 million, impacted by project delays, increased project costs, and conservative revenue recognition.

Concreat Holdings Philippines contributed a net loss of P1.6 billion, reflecting higher financing expenses, and softer revenue. The company is implementing strategic initiatives and investments to integrate operations, optimize efficiency, and improve its cost structure.

Equity earnings contribution from associates and the parent company increased 23% to P3.1 billion, from P2.5 billion, reflecting higher combined contributions across investments.
